PERFECT TRUST.

My boat is on the open sea
Which storms and tempest toss;
I know not of the ills to meet
Before I get across.

I do not know how long or short
The fitful trip may be;
But patient I'll abide His time
Who built the boat for me,

'Tis fully manned in every part,
Hope is the anchor fair;
The compass that it has is Faith,
And every oar is prayer.

Sometimes I see the breakers nigh,
The ocean madly roars,
But all I do is simply this—
Bend closer to the oars.

At times the waves run mountain high
And threaten me to strand;
I fear not, for He holds them in
The hollow of his hand.

The fog at times obscures my course,
I see the way but dim;
But well I know I cannot drift
Beyond the sight of Him.

I know not where the shoals may lie,
Nor where there the whirpools be,
It is enough, dear Lord, to feel
That they are known to Thee.

And thus content I glide along,
If either slow or fast,
Well knowing He will surely bring
Me safe to port at last.

THE EMERALD RING.

"For my part, I'm tired of regular proper picnics," said Eva Harrold as she stood on the upper portico of "The Double Hill House," among the White Mountains, and talked with a circle of her own particular friends. "Who cares to drive away from here, with a well-packed luncheon basket, bound for a certain place, and sure of coming straight back from that place as soon as the luncheon is eaten? Where is the fun in that? What I should like, would be to set off, no one should know where, and without one crumb of provisions. Then we should have some chance of an adventure before our return."

"Yes! For we should all starve to death in these lonely woods," laughed the girls.

"I think not—that is, if you will all trust yourselves to me!" exclaimed Herbert Hale, who lived (of late) only to humor the countless caprices of the handsome Baltimore heiress, and to execute her commands. "We will let the horses choose their own road, once we are well away from here, and then we will abide by what we happen to find, wherever they may take us. I promise that you shall not starve. And I make only one condition."

"What is that?" they cried.

"You must all be ready to start from this door exactly at half-past eleven o'clock to-morrow, if the morning is fine."

All agreed to be punctual, and the group broke up, for it was nearly time to dress for dinner.

Miss Harrold did not take the trouble to thank her votary in words. But, as she passed by him, she held out her hand, with a queenly smile.

He bent low over it, and felt himself amply repaid for all the thought, care and pains which this "impromptu" expedition was to cost him.

As he walked toward the further end of the long piazza, lost in calculation, a shrinking little figure drew aside, with a start, out of his way. A delicate, childlike face looked up at him.

Two weeks before that day Eva Harrold had not arrived at the Double Hill House, with her party of fashionable friends.

And Herbert Hale, worn out by a long winter of toil in his law-office, had been only too happy to spend those first days of his mountain holiday at Lilian Archer's side.

His heart smote him, as he saw the crimson flush on her face, and the trembling of the perfect lips that tried to greet him calmly.

"I hope you will not fail to make one of our party to-morrow," he said, kindly, as he passed her.

And Lillian, who had not seen that kiss pressed upon the white hand of the heiress, felt her foolish heart flutter with one of the old throbs of joy.

"Perhaps he has found out what a flirt Eva is," she thought, hopefully. "And he did seem really to care for me, until she came."

So Lily joined the "new departure" (as the pic-nic party called themselves) on the next morning.

She looked very modest and pretty in her white lawn dress, dotted with blue embroidered spots, and her white chip hat, with its broad blue ribbon.

And the heiress, resplendent in ribbons of cardinal red, insisted that Lily should occupy one side of the front seat, while she took the other, leaving the centre seat for Herbert, as charioteer.

His face was a study, for a moment, as he saw this unexpected arrangement. But he said nothing, and they drove off along a new and unknown road.

After two hours the horses were rested and plentifully fed. But nothing was offered to the ladies, until the carriage drew up before an old-fashioned brown farm-house, between four and five o'clock in the afternoon.

Here a "dinner tea," beginning with stewed chicken, and ending with 'berry shortcakes" piled high on immense china platters, awaited them.

They ate like famished creatures, all save Lily, whose aching heart was causing her a martyrdom of pain.

The horses were stabled in the farmer's barn. The picnic party, enjoying every moment of their novel pleasure, danced upon the green before the low, brown house, to the farmer's violin.

Miss Harrold waltzed once with Herbert, in token of her gratitude for a very pleasant day, she said. Then she sat apart, near Lily, and watched the brilliant scene.

They started home by moonlight. But ere long the sky darkened, and a wild western wind began to wail along the lonely road. The horses seemed a little restive over this sudden change. Herbert alighted to soothe them and to rearrange the harness.

"Lily!" whispered Eva, "my neuralgia is coming on again, on this side of my face and this wind makes it worse. Change places with me, will you, dear?"

It was done.

The clouds lowered more and more, but the horses trotted swiftly on. And beside Herbert, Lily was not at all afraid.

Suddenly, in the darkness, she felt a hand on hers. Herbert leaned toward her, whispered "Darling!" in the old, fond tones, and left a small package in her hand.

Breathless, and almost bewildered, with the sudden change from gloom to perfect joy, Lily sat silent, till they drew up again near the hotel.

Every one rose at once. Every one seemed to try to spring out of the carriage at once.

In the confusion, Lily knew that she was helped out by a stranger—not by Herbert.

But what did that matter while that whisper rang in her ears, and while she held that precious package in her hand?

She left them, telling their adventures to an inquisitive circle in the drawing-room, and followed fast on Eva Harrold's steps, as she hurried to her room for the night.

The door once closed upon the world, Lily opened the package.

It contained a small velvet casket. The casket held a beautiful emerald ring; and with the ring was this letter:

"I cannot tell you here all that is in my heart for you. May I speak with you to-morrow afternoon, in the dear old parlor? Wear this ring, to-morrow, as a token, if you consent."

"The dear old parlor!" Yes, that was where they two had spent so many happy hours—just at first—before Miss Harrold came.

Wear the ring? Aye, that she would! With a sob of thankful, pious joy, the poor child slipped it on her finger, said her prayers, with Herbert's name in them, and sank tranquilly to sleep.

The early morning stage brought a new guest a handsome, languid Southerner, who seemed to think it a great exertion even to live.

Before noon the truth came out. The Southerner was the future husband of Miss Harrold; and the next day the party would leave for Baltimore, to celebrate the wedding.

Lily wore the emerald ring in vain! By nightfall, she heard them jesting over the sudden flight of Herbert Hale. He had left the hotel without attempting to see her—without even waiting for an answer to the question he had asked.

Six years passed by. She, too, was an heiress, but she was alone in the world. Miss Harrold was the wife of the Southern gentleman; and Herbert Hale was still a bachelor, when he and Lily happened to meet once more, at that same hotel, in the course of their Summer's tour.

They stood, one evening, talking coldly and quietly of those other days, when the moonlight fell full upon Lily's hand, and upon the emerald ring, which she had forgotten to lay aside that day.

Herbert turned pale as he looked at it.

"You two changed places in the carriage that night," he said, speaking before he thought.

Then Lily saw, felt, and understood it all.

"What a fool I have been! What must you have thought of me?" she cried, in an agony of self-contempt, wrenching the ring from her hand and throwing it passionately on the floor.

Herbert picked it up.

"It was given rightly, even if I gave it by mistake," he said. "Lily, I never really loved her! But you—oh, my darling, we two are alone in the world. Let me put this ring on again until I give you another."

In time she must have been persuaded. For the "keeper" of Mrs. Herbert Hale's wedding-ring is an emerald to-day.

TEN years ago a blast furnace which would make 400 tons of metal per week on 600 tons of fuel was considered a big thing. There are blast furnaces in Pittsburg which produce 1500 tons of metal per week on less than 1500 tons of fuel. the old method of heating permitted the flame to pass out of the furnace stack at a temperature of 3000 deg. F. They are now using the regenerating stoves in Pittsburg, and do not let the gases out until they have utilized all the heat except 300 deg.

Chasing the Electric Light.

Not long ago a Denver and Rio Grande engineer came into Denver after several weeks' absence on the southwestern extensions. He arrived near Littleton about eleven o'clock at night, indulging in fond anticipations of soon meeting with his family, of whom he is passionately fond. The night was dark and gloomy, heavy and threatening clouds obscured the full moon, overcast the face of the heavens with an inky pall of blackness, and rendered the outlines of the distant mountains indiscernible. But he was used to the sombre surroundings of night and loved his engine as a man loves and pets a favorite horse. He had traversed with it the continental divide, and sped through the deepest canons and past the sharpest curves overhanging yawning chasms and gorges, and it had always proved true to his trust, escaping dangers as though endowed with reasoning powers. Therefore he was in a happy frame of mind, the past leaving no remorse and the future bright, when suddenly he discovered a gleaming headlight directly in his front. With the promptness that can only be obtained through long and patient schooling in the face of peril he reversed the steam and put on the air brakes. There was a rough grating and a jar for a few moments upon the swiftly revolving wheels, and the train came to a stop. After waiting for several minutes he alighted and listened, but no sound met his ears except the pattering of a few stray rain drops and the hissing of steam as it escaped from his own engine. He immediately clambered in and out of his cab several times, and at length carefully started his train for the purpose of a nearer approach, and of ascertaining the cause of the delay. He ran at a slow speed for several minutes, passing at least a mile and a half, with no practical diminishing of the distance between himself and the unaccountable light. He then opened the throttle still wider, and the engine bounded along with a velocity startling even to experienced engineers, but the glow of the light ever remained abreast, undimmed and unchanged by time or space. The fact was a startling one, and in spite of all his endeavors the thought of evil spirits making themselves manifest crowded upon his bewildered mind until the sweat ran down his grim face and each particular hair twined around like a writhing serpent. Determined to solve the problem at any cost, and whether angel or devil, with life or death at its command, to meet and fathom the mystery, he pressed on. The throttle was opened wide, the fireman shoveled coal into the furnace with a recklessness that could only arise from a full knowledge that he did not have it to pay for. The train roared as it swept down the plains through the darkness, and at length rushed into Denver at the speed of forty miles an hour, startling people for blocks around, who, bounding from there beds, believed that some dire calamity had happened or was about to occur. Arriving at the depot, the train was stopped, and the engineer sent the fireman for a policeman. Officer Minart was soon found, who hastened to the call and declared himself ready to perform anything within his line of duty. The engineer slowly pulled off his coat, and offered the officer five dollars to kick him across three squares, having discovered that he had been chasing the electric light on the Union depot tower.

Chew Plug It's The Nastiest.

Tobacco, like the Canadian thistle, is a weed, and, while it is indigenous to the American States, its cultivation as a commercial commodity is limited almost entirely to the States of Virginia North Carolina, Kentucky, Connecticut, Ohio and Illinois. The Virginia and Keatucky product is used almost exclusively in the manufacture of plug; the product of the other States goes into cigars and cheap smoking tobacco, except that quite all of the fancy plugs are wrapped with North Carolina leaf. Before the war, in Rapides Parish, Louisiana, an immense business was done in growing perique tobacco, used exclusively for smoking, though put up in plugs shaped somewhat like a champagne bottle. It sold at fabulous prices and by old smokers was esteemed higher than opium by the Mussulman. Very little perique is grown now.

In the days preceding the war, tobacco was cultivated almost entirely by slave labor, there was no federal or state tax upon it, and no incentive to manufacturers to cheat or adulterate. When slavery was abolished, when the government put a heavy tax upon its sale, the cunning American began devising ways for defrauding the luxurious consumer, for as yet no means have been devised for defrauding the revenue department. Many apochryphal stories are told of the way plug tobacco is doctored and adulterated, but, sifted down, the truth is fully expressed in the words of a prominent manufacturer: "Nothing ever goes into tobacco as deleterious or injurious to the constitution as tobacco itself." Nevertheless, skilled workmen command extraordinarily high salaries for the dexterity with which they will take a cheap or damaged lot of tobacco and so disguise it in a wrapper as to deceive even an old tar.

An average plug-tobacco manufacturing establishment works about 200 hands. The tobacco is sorted into four grades, from which are produced as many as seventy-five or a hundred different brands, the pencil of the artist and the skill of the photographer being brought into requisition for ornamental designs to catch the toothless old man as well as the precocious boy. While the government requires every package to bear the stencil-mark of the manufacturer, it would be supposed that none but straight goods would be put up; but it is with tobacco as with whisky—always a fair demand for the stuff, be it ever so vile. Licorice, oils, molasses, glucose, and similar sweets, are liberally used by some manufacturers, and while it is certainly a cheat, it is as well a harmless one. For example, on August 20, Virginia lug was quoted at 4 to 4½ cents, government tax added 16 cents, yet the manufactured product was quoted as low as 17 cents. Evidently the worker-up of these lugs had the tobacco chewer by the lug.

But in fine-cut tobacco and cigars is where the greatest deception is practiced. A western manufacturer says that there is no end to the adulteration of fine-cut goods. Machinery has been so improved that, as he says, "with one pound of tobacco liquor, obtained by boiling down stems and refuse leaf, one pound of rag weed, and one pound of slippery elm bark five dollars' worth of fine-cut chewing tobacco can be produced. The suggestion of slippery elm bark was a new one, and the inquiry was pursued further. He said it was nicely shaved, and mixed with tobacco; that it had a pleasant, sweet taste, held the tobacco together, and made the "quid" last a long time. This bark costs about four cents a pound, and as it sells as high as seventy-five cents a pound, one can easily see the enormous profit resulting. A gentleman who knows says that nearly all the slippery-elm trees in Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan have been denuded of their bark, yet a leading wholesale druggist in Chicago affirms that 50,000 pounds of slippery-elm bark would, for legitimate druggist and medicinal trade, glut the entire market of the United States.

In cigars, cheroots, cigarettes, and smoking tobacco is probably where the public get robbed the worst. The canning devices are so many that even good judges are imposed upon. It used to be a boast among gentlemen that they could always select a fine brand of cigars, and of course they smoked no other. The other day an old smoker, whose devotion to the weed costs him five dollars every week, admitted that he couldn't tell Havana filled from Connecticut stuffed. The dishonest article, however, is the product of the big manufactories, for the small country manufacturer cannot afford the machinery nor conceal the lotions and decoctions that are brought into requisition by his wealthier competitor. It is quite safe to assume that about the purest,—no, not purest, for if there is any one thing impure it is tobacco,—the honestest cigar is the hand made cigars of the local manufacturer. And yet, one of these relates a sad tale of how even he was led to be dishonest. He had a small store on the West Side, and was joined in his labor by his wife, two daughters and a son, and an occasional "jour." By buying close, manufacturing square, he had built up a splendid local trade. One day a tramp jour. came along, and he gave him work. He was the soberest and steadiest fellow he had ever employed, and even his girls got to liking him. He was a good workman, and easily persuaded his employer to let him work overtime of nights and Sundays. For a month or two the little manufacturing establishment doted on the new workman. But all at once and without any apparent cause the trade began to fall off. First one old customer and then another quit purchasing, so that the manufacturer became financially embarrassed. He went to one of his heaviest purchasers and asked him why he had taken his trade elsewhere The gentleman showed him why. Opening one of the manufacturer's boxes, he showed him the usual handsome cigar, but, tearing it open, it was found to be filled with mashed stems and brown paper soaked in tobacco liquor. The manufacturer went home, watched his model jour. and found that the work he was doing in overtime was stealing his employer's good cigars and palming in their place his own worthless ones, selling the good ones on his own account.

This much can be said to the credit of the tobacco dealer: His product is purely a luxury,—in no sense entering into the medical or mechanical arts,—and, being a luxury, no law, not even public opinion, can restrain him from the practice of any little cheat to enhance his profits. Which brings up again the admission that in all his cheats "nothing is put into tobacco more deleterious to the human system than the tobacco itself."

Attend to Your Watch.

There are very few of the many who carry watches who ever think of the complexity of their delicate mechanism, and of the extraordinary and unceasing labor they perform. There are many who think a watch ought to run and keep good time for years, without a particle of oil, who would not think of running a common piece of machinery a day without oiling, the wheels of which do but a fraction of the service. For example, the main-wheel makes four revolutions in twenty-four hours or 1,460 in a year; the second or center-wheel twenty-four revolutions in twenty-four hours, or 8,760 in a year; the third wheel, 192 revolutions in twenty-four hours, or 70,080 in a year; the fourth wheel, carrying the second hand, 1,440 in twenty-four hours, or 525,600 in a year; the fifth or scape-wheel, 12,964 in twenty-four hours, or 5,529,000 revolutions in a year, while the beats, or vibrations, made in twenty-four hours are 432,000 or 157,680,000 in a year.

Not on My Books.

One day this past summer a little knot of men, among whom were two Michiganders, got into a dispute in Deadwood regarding some of the ancients. A part of the crowd held that Cato was a great poet, while others asserted that he was an orator, and it was finally agreed to leave it to a grocer around the corner, who was supposed to be well posted on most all matters. The crowd therefore proceeded to his store in a body, and the spokesman brusquely queried:

"Say, Jim, can you settle a dispute?"

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.

"Well, then, what was Cato's best hold?"

"Cato—Cato—hold on a minute" replied Jim, as he started for his desk. He opened his ledger, ran down the index to "C," glanced over the names and then returned and said:

"Don't find him here on my books, and I reckon he was some scrub who jumped in here awhile, got down to roots and then took the cross-cut for Gunnison. Did he go through any of you?

Benedict Arnold.

Benedict Arnold, after his retirement from New York and the butcheries he committed on his countrymen as a British major-general, reappeared on the American Continent as a citizen and merchant of St. John, New Brunswick. We have obtained some information on the subject quite new to the people of the United States. A highly respectable gentleman by the name of Lawrence, a furniture dealer in St. John, Canada, obtained from the executor of Mr. Chipman, the Colonial Solicitor General, who was a friend of Arnold, and his counsel in his numerous lawsuits at St. John, several autograph letters and other documents throwing considerable light on the career of that vindictive adventurer. Mr. Lawrence is a gentleman of a fine, intelligent, American countenance, with milk-white hair. He converses with difficulty on account of his bad hearing, but he cheerfully gave me such information as he supposed would be pleasing to me, and also produced autograph letters of Arnold and of his wife, the celebrated Miss Shippen, of Philadelphia. It appears from these that Arnold left New York City pending the treaty of peace with Great Britain, when he was apprehensive that he might be in personal danger on account of the rigorous refusal of the Americans to consider any terms of concession for the Tories in arms. He therefore sailed in one of three vessels, all of which departed from New York about the same time, in the year 1782. Among the officers in this company were Lord Cornwallis, Colonel Tarleton, Colonel Simcoe, of the Loyalist Rangers, Major Ross—perhaps the same officer who was subsequently killed at the attack on the city of Baltimore—and several others. The vessel he was on was called the Robust; another vessel of the trio was called the London. When they were within a short distance of the British coast, making for Falmouth or Southampton, a French privateer captured one of these vessels, and on the privateer were some Americans. A Mr. Geyer, a Massachusetts Tory, was one of the prisoners. He says in a letter: "I was soon recognized by an American privateersman, who upbraided me with having deserted my country." Geyer took this American aside and bribed him to say nothing about his status. They then gave 1,200 guineas ransom for the vessel, and were allowed to take her into an English harbor. Arnold's vessel escaped.

The next letter in Mr. Lawrence's possession is dated Halifax, and says that General Arnold has just arrived (1786) in that port in a brig of his own, and is going to settle at St, John. "What an acquisition!" says the writer, using the exclamation point as if he doubted whether such a citizen as Arnold would be of any good to St. John. Arnold soon arrived at St. John with his vessel, and landed his effects, and built himself a storehouse at what is called Lower Cove Slip, on the point of St. John between the mouth of the river of that name and Courtney Bay, or the Backwater. It is immediately opposite the Island in the harbor called Partridge Island, which Whittier in his poem has mistakenly called "Isle of the Pheasants." Here Arnold took a partner named Munson Hoyt, a Connecticut citizen, or refugee. He built vessels and sailed them from St. John to the West Indies. He also maintained a lumberyard at Carleton, near the falls of St. John. Sometime afterward he built a house on the northwest corner of King and Germain streets, two short blocks above the market slip, which was standing until 1866, when it was destroyed by a fire. It was a wooden house, a story and a half high, with a hip gable. Here he resided with his wife and children, some of whom may have been born in St. John.

He was suspected by the citizens from the beginning, partly on account of his services in the rebel American cause and partly because he was a traitor to that cause for no other consideration than revenge and money. A cloud was upon his character all the time he was in St. John. He was of a litigious spirit, and figured in the courts continually. His store took fire some time after he had been in business and burned to the ground, and he recovered considerable insurance upon it. A year or more afterward his old partner, Hoyt, publicly accused him of having set fire to the store. Arnold at once instituted a suit for slander, laying damages at £10,000. An abstract of the testimony and the charges in this case is in possession of Mr. Lawrence, which I saw. Among the charges in the indictment is one that Hoyt said "his character was as black as it could be." Filing his rejoinder to this in court Mr. Hoyt said: "It would be impossible for any man to have a blacker character than Benedict Arnold." Arnold alleges in his affidavit that he is a faithful citizen of the Crown and of good general character and commercial standing, and that he has been damaged to the amount claimed. The jury returned a verdict of $3 to $4.

In course of time Arnold went to the West Indies as a ship-chandler and purveyor for the British fleet. He writes a letter from Martinique detailing his hazards. His wife, who signs her name Margaret Arnold, (Arnold called her "Peggy," also writes a letter which I read, referring to the remarkable escapes of the General in the West Indies and speaking of his courageous exertions as the only reason why he was saved. Her letter begins something to the following effect. "I cannot admit that I would ever like to live in St. John again, but I have the best wishes for some of the people there, among them my dear friends the Chipmans. Dear old England is in a bad way on account of the outrageous treatment she has received by her allies." She then writes politics for a few sentences, intimating that the Ministry has been severely handled by its opponents, the Whigs. Her letter shows that she was a woman of education and considerable address, and bears out the common opinion in America that she had some influence in taking Arnold away from the Americans and their cause.

There is another letter in Mr. Lawrence's possession from Benedict Arnold, defending himself from the jealousy of his peers in the British army for having received £2,000, or $10,000, by order of the King in person, as a full eighth of certain property and prizes captured while acting against his former countrymen in Virginia. He names several of these officers high in rank as having shown a very misreable spirit. He says that he never put in the least petition on his behalf, but that the Ministry and the King stepped forward and ordered him to have an eighth. It thus appears that Arnold was tolerably prosperous while in the British cause. He not only received $30,000 for betraying his post in the Highlands, but got at least $10,000 prize money, and possibly more, in other captures. Mr. Lawrence says he was the recipient of a regular pension. It is also known that he had about 1,000 acres of land given him somewhere in Canada. With this money he went into business.

After his retirement from St. John and the West Indies he settled in London, where he died obscurely about 1801. His wife survived him a few years. His son, who was a babe at the time of his treason in the Highlands and was named Thomas Robertson Arnold, lived to be a lieutenant-general in the British army, signalizing himself in Egypt. He came to St. John many years afterward, and while entering the house his father built burst into tears. This son died about ten years before the opening of the American War of Secession in Brompton, London. Mr. Lawrence said to me: "If the British government had possessed officers of the enterprise and thoroughness of General Arnold, the American colonies would not have effected their separation. The regular officers sent out to subdue the American Colonies were too considerate and politic for that kind of work." Another gentlemen of St. John who was sitting by said: "What the British wanted to put down America was a man of the ability of Lord Clive, who conquered India. He was an unscrupulous man in his methods, but tremendous for results." The site of Arnold's house is now occupied by a brick store, built since the fire of 1877. The site of his store at Lower Cove Slip is still empty, and is said never to have had a house upon it since the store burned down. In the history of St. John there figure several other persons of the name of Arnold, perhaps his sons. As is well known, General Arnold was descended from one of the Colonial Governors of Rhode Island.

How the Czar is Crowned.

Although some ceremony of inauguration accompanied the succession of the early Grand Princes of Moscow, Tver, Kief, etc., and the first two Czars of All the Russias, Ivan IV (Vassilivitch), surnamed the Terrible, who came to the throne when he was sixteen years old, in 1847, seems to have been the first Czar who was crowned according to our modern notion of that ceremony. But his coronation was performed with little of the pomp and paraphernalia used in these days. The ceremonial now ordinarily followed was first observed at the accession of Feodore Iwanovitch, the last of the dynasty of Rurik, in 1584, and he was the first Czar who received at the hands of the Pontiff the consecrated oil. On leaving the old Palace of the Kremlin for the Cathedral of the Assumption, the Czar is preceded by a cortege conveying his regalia. These are received by the clergy with a cloud of incense and a murmured blessing at the church door, and then deposited inside in the place appointed for them. They compose the various crowns of the ancient and modern kingdoms and princedoms included at the time in the Russian Empire; the imperial standard of yellow satin embroidered with the arms and devices of the same provinces: the sceptre, globe, and the imperial purple, and the cross worn on the breast, in which is set a piece of the true cross. Nor should the historic cape be forgotten, called by the Russians barmy, signifying the weight of empire and the responsibility which the new sovereign is taking upon his shoulders. It is richly jewelled, and ornamented with enamels portraying different scenes out of the Old and New Testament. The story goes that it once belonged to Constantine Monomachus and was sent to the Grand Prince Vladmir II by the Emperor Alexis Commenus in the year 1116 A. D. After the Czar has made the profession of the Orthodox faith he is helped by the Metropolitan of Kief and the Archbishop of Moscow into the Imperial mantle. The crown is then brought and placed on his head, the officiating prelate intoning something like the following formula: "Most pious, puissant, great lord, Emperor of all Russia! This visible and material ornament is the outward sign of the mysterious act by which the King of Glory crowns thee at this moment—thee the chief of all the people of Russia—confirming thee by means of his holy benediction in thy absolute and supreme authority over thy subjects." Next he places the sceptre in his right hand and the globe in his left, saying: "O thou crowned of God! Thou whom He has favored by His gifts and adorned by His graces most powerful and great lord, Emperor of all Russia, receive the sceptre and the globe! They are the symbols of the supreme power which the Most High has given thee over thy people to govern them and assure their well-being," Various prayers commonly intervene between the act of coronation and that of consecration, which is performed by the Metropolitan of Novgorod touching the forehead, eyelids, nostrils, lips and ears of the Czar, as well as the palms of his hands, with the consecrated oil, saying the while, "This is the gift of the Holy Spirit." The Metropolitan of Kief thereupon wipes all traces of the oil from the Imperial hands and countenance—a wholesome innovation of comparatively modern times; for, as lately as last century, the Czar was supposed to abstain from washing for seven days after the ceremony those parts which the consecrated oil has touched. No sooner has the Czar been crowned than he hastens to perform the same office for his consort. First he touches with his own crown the forehead of the kneeling Czarina, to show that she must take her part in the responsibilities of power; then, assisted by her ladies, he fixes the proper diadem of the Empress-consort on her brow. When a Czarina is crowned independently of her husband, she enjoys a more magnificent cerimonial. Marina, the Polish wife of the False Demitri, was crowned at Moscow with extraordinary magnificence on the 18th of May, 1606. This wayward lady, who was a Roman Catholic, refused, it is recorded, to make the Orthodox confession, and claimed the right to go to church dressed after the latest French fashion—a robe with a long waist and a ruff two feet in diameter, and the smallest slippers that could be bought in Paris on her feet—all which was a grave scandal to the simple Muscovites, who had been accustomed to see their Czarina wearing the national garb, which had no waist at all, and hob-nailed boots such as Russian peasants wear now on their coronation day

DAVIS SUCCESSOR TO BAYARD.

As soon as the republicans of the United States senate saw that they could shape things to suit themselves, they proceeded to do so. The thought that they were powerless even for a few days was unendurable to them and the first opportunity that presented itself to regain that power was taken hold of. Mr. Bayard was not the man they desired on the president's chair and consequently haste was made to remove him and put another there. Mr. Logan nominated Mr. Davis, of Illinois, for president pro tem, and after some protests from Mr. Pendleton, Mr. Davis was declared elected. The republicans thus succeeded in gaining the power of choosing the president pro tem. but whether their choise was a wise one, remains to be seen.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION OF NEW YORK.

The Democrats of New York held their state convention on Wednesday of last week and nominated the following ticket:

Secretary of state, Wm. Purcell; comptroller, George H. Lapham; attorney general, Gen. Roswell A. Parmenter: state treasurer, Roberts Maxwell; state engineer, Thomas Evershed; judge of court of appeals, W. C. Ruger.

On our trip to Lewisburg, Sunbury, Williamsport and Lock Haven, last week, we were asked about twenty-five times how Wolfe stock rates hereabouts. Don't know, can't tell, gentlemen—too busy to take the census. All such inquiries respectfully refered to Jim, Tim, Sam and Gust.

Lewisburg has a new paper the Daily News, established by the republican bosses to fight Charley Wolfe in his own home. It is a harmless, inoffensive little thing however, and its editorials read very much like a school boy's first attempt at compositon.

MR. NOBLE'S ACCEPTANCE.

Official Notification of His Nomination.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 3, 1881.

To the Hon. Orange Noble:

DEAR SIR:—We have been authorized by the Democratic state convention which met at Williamsport on the 28th day of September last, to formally announce to you the action of that body in nominating you to the important office of State Treasurer of Pennsylvania.

It must be a scource of gratification for you to know that your selection by the convention as a standard-bearer of the party and the representative of its principles in the present campaign was made from a large number of the most reputable gentlemen of the state, the nomination of any one of whom would have reflected credit upon the party.

It is also a fact worthy of note that in these times of political jugglery your nomination was uninfluenced by faction, corrupt combinations or boss dictation, which are ever abhorrent to Democratic ideas, but was accomplished by the representatives of the party, acting freely in the exercise of their judgment as to its best interests, and the will of the majority thus expressed, finally ratified by the unanimous voice of the convention.

With every reasonable prospect of success, and sustained as you will be by a united party, you come before the people under the most auspicious circumstances and enter upon the race without any weight or hindrance to beset your way to ultimate success.

And in the event of election we are assured that the solemn pledges made by the convention to the people, in the resolutions adopted, will be by you redeemed; that you will hold the office as a sacred trust from the people; and that the rigid administration of the finances of the state inaugurated by you will mark the end of the power and influence of the "Treasury Ring" in Pennsylvania.

Very truly your obedient servants,

GEO. W. MILLER,
GEO. MCGOWAN,
W. J. BRENNAN,
P. F. CONNOLLY,
R. E. JAMES.

Reply.

ERIE, Oct. 10, 1881.

Messrs. Geo. W. Miller, Geo. McGowan, W. J. Brennan, P. F. Connolley and R. E. James, Committee:

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter formally notifying me of my nomination for State Treasurer by the recent Democratic state convention at Williamsport would have been answered sooner but for unavoidable absence from home.

You say truly that it is a high compliment to have been made the nominee when so many worthy gentlemen were competitors for the position. I am gratified to know that the rivalry for the nomination was of the most friendly character, both before and during the sessions of the convention, and assure you that, if the choice had fallen upon any one of the candidates, my friends and myself would have given him a ready and active support. The reflection to which you so appropriately refer that the nomination "was uninfluenced by faction, corrupt combinations or boss dictation" adds very much to my appreciation of the honor.

I accept the nomination with a full understanding of the responsibility it imposes, and pledge myself that if the confidence reposed in me by the convention is ratified by the people they shall not be disappointed in their just expectations. The Treasury will be administered as "a sacred tsust from the people;" care will be taken to employ none but pure, competent and trustworthy men; the records of the office will always be open for the most rigid scrutiny; the corrupt "rings" will be discountenanced; and the constant effort will be to reduce expense, collect the revenues impartially, and in every way possible to promote the interests of the state. Not a dollar that does not legitimately belong to me shall be taken as a part of the compensation of the office.

The platform is one of the boldest and soundest that has been adopted by a convention of any party in Pennsylvania for many years. Those portions especially which relate to the rights, duties and control of the great corporations are in accord with my life-long convictions, and I cannot doubt that they will be approved by the people. While I would not take from any corporation a single right that properly belongs to it, I insist, in common with most of the business men, farmers and mechanics of the state, that none shall be above the law, that monopolies must not be tolerated, and that the "greatest good of the greatest number" must be the supreme object of the government.

Having made no pledges of patronage during the canvass for the nomination, and being determined to continue the same policy until the close of the campaign, I will be free, in the event of my election, to make such appointments as will best advance the principles above stated. I have no enemies to punish and will know no factions in the selection of my subordinates.

With thanks to the convention and kind regards for each of the committe,

I am yours truly,
ORANGE NOBLE.

Wolfe Stock on the Rise.

Harrisburg Independent.

Disguise it as you will the independent movement in Pennsylvania, headed by Representative Wolfe, is assuming very formidable proportions. Nearly all the independent journals of the State have espoused the cause of the eloquent Union county reformer, while a number of pronounced Republican organs have so far unloosed their fealty to the "machine," as to place his name side by side with the "alleged" regular nominee of the party. In addition to this, a majority of the great reform committee of One Hundred in Philadelphia, have openly taken up the Wolfe cause, and are prosecuting a vigorous canvass in that city in his behalf. From other portions of the State likewise come news of Independent demonstrations, which in many cases result in the formation of "Wolfe clubs," with a large and gathering membership. At every point visited by Mr. Wolfe, he has been received with the utmost enthusiasm, and the public meetings he addresses are distinguished for the magnitude and high political character of their participants. The fact that no party principles are involved in the contest adds strength to the movement. It is simply a question of reform against boss or machine rule of the party, and from the present appearance of things it looks very much as if the former would win.

Agreed Upon One Point.

From the New York World.

Upon one point at least, if only upon one point, the stalwarts and the half-breeds are agreed at the present time—that the conduct of one man prominent in public life has been marked, from the moment when President Garfield was struck down by an assassin to the moment of his burial in Ohio, by unvarying decency, modesty, and dignity. That man is President's Garfield's antagonist at the polls in 1880, Winfield Scott Hancock, who but for the treason of Tammany hall would to-day have been president of these United States.

Candidate Noble weighs 180 pounds. That's exactly the right heft for such a noble candidate.

NO MORE CHARTERS.

Gov. Hoyt has at last discovered that life insurance companies upon the mutual assessment plan are not just the best things for the good of the state and people, and gives notice in the following circular that no more charters will be issued to new companies. It is a real pity that our clever Governor did not know this several years ago, for he might then have prevented much misery, crime and shame throughout the entire state:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 14, '81.

J. M. Forster, Esq., Insurance Commissioner of Pennsylvania.—The business as carried on by so-callrd insurance companies, "on the principle of assessment of surviving members of the association," is in my opinion not the business contemplated under the statutes of the State authorizing the issue of charters to insurance companies. Hereafter no letters patent to insurance companies who propose to do business under the plans indicated will be issued from the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, unless under the order of the courts having jurisdiction.

Very respectfully,
H. M. HOYT.

The chairman of the republican committee of Bedford county has issued a circular calling on the members of the Reformed church to vote for John Cessna for President Judge Now we can't for the life of us determine whether that is carrying politics in religion or religion into politics.

J. C. HARPER, ESQ., our present efficient Prothonotary and candidate for re-election, will have a walk-over at the election. He has filled the position to the fullest satisfaction of all. Never was there better system and order in our Prothonotary's office, and never was its business transacted with more accuracy, and dispatch. The party through its county convention, gave him a well-earned and fitting compliment in the shape of a nomination by acclamation, and the action of the convention will be seconded by a heavy vote throughout the entire county, more particularly by the valleys, where Cal was born and raised and where every body knew him from infancy. Cal will stay—that's sure.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE is on our table for November, ahead of all others, and better than ever. It leads off with a charming steel engraving, after Meyer Von Bremen, "Half Afraid." This is followed by one of those double size, steel fashion-plates, superbly colored, only seen in this unrivaled lady's book. Then comes another engraving, "Lacy Hall," illustrating an exquisitely told love-story; and then some fifty wood-cuts of dresses, patterns in embroidery, &c., &c. There is also a superb colored slipper-pattern, for braiding, in crimson and gold. The principal article is "A Day At Canterbury." which is profusely illustrated, and is of a character very much higher than is usually seen in magazines. The tales and novelets are even better than usual, and "Peterson," as is known, always gives the best. With this number, appears the Prospectus for 1882. when SIX ORIGINAL NOVELETS will be given, and, in addition, a hundred shorter stories. A series of brilliantly illustrated stories, and articles like "Canterbury," will also appear. Also a PAPER PATTERN FOR A DRESS, every month. The price of "Peterson" is but TWO DOLLARS A YEAR, postage free. To clubs, the terms are even lower, viz.: two copies for $3.50, with a superb engraving (size 20 inches by 15) "HUSH DON'T WAKE THEM," or a handsome PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM, as a premium. Or four copies for $6.50, and an extra copy of the magazine itself as premium. Or five copies for $8.00, with both an extra copy and either the Engraving or Album for premium. For larger clubs, the premiums are even more tempting. Now is the time to get up clubs for 1882, "Peterson" combines more, for a less price, than any other. Specimens are sent, gratis, if written for. Subscribe to nothing until you have seen a copy. Address CHARLES J. PETERSON, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LI
IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.
IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST. When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspabers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information address GEO. P. —One of the best assortments of Silk Handkerchiefs, Canvasses, Notions and Novelties can be found at the Journal store. Prices the very lowest.

—A splendid, strong 2 horse spring wagon for sale. None better in the valley. Price moderate. Inquire at the Journal office. tf

—Brilliant colors in Germantown Wool, Zephyr, Saxony Wool, Silk Floss you will find at the Journal store, next door to the post office on Main Street.

—It affords us pleasure to state that our neighbor, Mr. J. W. Snook who had been confined to the sickbed for over a week, is convalescing. Hope to see him strong and vigorous again in a few days.

—Mr. J. F. Torbert and lady who had been absent from town for some time visiting their folks in Schuylkill county, have returned and are making their abode with mine host W. S. Musser, as before.

—A full line of School Books, Copy Books, Slates, Pencils, Pens, &c., always on hand at the Journal Book and Stationery store on Main Street, next door to the post office.

—The ladies of Rebersburg and vicinity would better not purchase their fall hats until Mrs. E. J. Carlin returns from New York city, where she is at present buying her stock of millinery goods.

—J. A. LIMBERT, the new mail contractor, has procured a fine new wagon and is prepared to carry express packages and other goods from Coburn to Woodward and all intermediate points at reasonable charges. tf

—Our readers will be gratified to learn that the business of the popular Bee Hive dry goods store, Lock Haven, will be continued at the old place just the same as before the recent death of the late proprietor, Mr. J. J. Everett.

—Your children ought to be clothed in warm garments as the weather is very changeable and good protection of the body is necessary. For that purpose come to the Journal store, where the best Children's Merino Vests are kept for sale at low prices.

—Mrs. Annie M. Weaver has left for New York to lay in her fall and winter stock of hats, bonnets, and other millinery goods. Mrs. Weaver is an enterprising business woman, keeps the best stock the market affords and sells really cheap.

—S. P. Kerstetter's in Lewisburg, is just a splendid place to buy queensware, lamps, and groceries generally. If you go there you will find a full and complete line of goods, low prices and a first rate, clever man to deal with. Just try it and see for yourself.

—Jas. A. McClain and J. C. Harper, cadidatesn for Register and Prothonotary respectively, paid us a short visit last week. They looked pleased, happy, confident, talked cheerfully, shook hands gracefully, and went their way rejoicing.

—Mr. Cyrus G. Bright has opened a new boot and shoe store in Aaronsburg. Cyrus is a skillful and experienced shoemaker himself and fully understands the wants and tastes of our people. He sells as cheap as the cheapest and should be liberally patronized.

—On Thursday of last week a little son of Benj. Stover, residing at Pine Creek, Haines township, while hunting fish worms in company with his brother, met with a serious accident. Forest was just lifting the pick to dig into the ground when Clarence bent forward to take up a worm. The sharp point of the pick went straight into his right eye, completely emptying the optic cavity. Drs. Deshler are the attending physicians and report the child doing as well as can be expected.

—That good, kind soul, Mrs. Jacob Keen brought us a monstrous big hen's egg last week. We don't care to give the exact size and weight in figures, lest our friends would accuse us of stretching—as if an editor could even stretch an egg—but it is fully as large as a "gooth egg" anyhow.

—Ayer's Hair Vigor restores the color and stimulates the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling off, and greatly increases its beauty. It has a delicate and lasting perfume, its ingredients are harmless, and for the toilet it is unequalled.

—Last week for the first time we had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Mr. Wm. C. Ward, Gen. Freight Agent of the P. & E. R. R., and Mr. J. Lewis Hough, Chief Clerk to Supt. Neilson. We called at their headquarters in Williamsport on a little business, and left them with the impression that they are full sized gentlemen in every sense of the word.

—In reading the Journal this week don't skip the cards of A. Simon's, Sons, Grocers, and Simon Brothers, Clothiers, Lock Haven. The brothers and sons, or sons and brothers—it reads well either way—are active, enterprising business men, keep the best the market affords and sell at bottom prices. No better places anywhere to get full value for your money "and don't you forget it."

—It is admitted on all hands that a visit to Lock Haven would be very unsatisfactory, and incomplete without going to Whitcomb's Mammoth Clothing Store. Mr. Whitcomb keeps everything that goes into the make up of men's clothing. His stock is as complete as his prices are low, and his many customers always leave with glad hearts and cheerful countenances, knowing that they have received as much for their cash as any man can possibly give.

—The winter term of our public schools in the borough and township will commence next Monday, October 24th. Parents take a note of this and have your children fully equipped and ready to start to school that day. It is of no small importance that you should enable and urge them to put in their full time. Every schoolhour lost, decreases the knowledge they ought to acquire as children and which they will sadly miss in their older days. A word to the wise is sufficient.

—One day last week two Aaronsburg boys, the one a son of Mr. Summers, the other of Mr. Fred Limbert, engaged in a hand to hand fight in that place, and in a fit of uncontrollable passion young Summers made use of a knife and stabbed Limbert in the thigh, severing one of the arteries. The boys, we are told, had an old spite at each other that finally resulted in this passionate fight.

—The corner-stone for the new St. John's Lutheran Church at this place was laid with religious services and ceremonies on Sunday last. The day was a fair one from about nine o'clock until evening, and a great many people had assembled to witness the solemn rite. Unusually able and instructive sermons were preached on Saturday and Sunday evenings, by Rev. W. H. Diven, of Saloona, and on Sunday morning by Rev. S. E. Furst, of Bellefonte. The collection mounted to about fifty dollars, which swells the total contributions to date to the clever sum of $3450. The people of Millheim as well as the visiting ministers and other strangers present were all well pleased and doubtless much benefitted by the preaching and exercises of the day.

The Gallows in Snyder County.

Jonathan Moyer, Emanuel Ettinger and Israel Erb, convicted of the murder of John and Gretchen Kintzler in the court of oyer and treminer for Snyder county, are to be executed at Middleburg on Friday, December 16. The trial of the condemned excited much interest and was reviewed by the supreme court on an appeal by the defendants, but the higher tribunal sustained the rulings of Judge Bucher. Messrs. Potter, Honer and Grimm were of counsel for the commonwealth and Messrs. Dill, Smith and Linn for defendants.

Re-union of the Fifty-Third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The second re-union of the old 53d Reg't P. V. will be held at Milton, Northumberland Co. Pa., on Tuesday December 13th 1881. It is expected that a large proportion of the surviving members of the regiment will be present. Geo. C. Anderson of Latrobe, Westmoreland Co., is president of the association. P. H. Schreyer of Milton, Vice President, Jno, M. Caldwell, Milton, Treasurer, and A. B. Mann, of Coudersport, Sec'y. The Executive Committee consists of Geo. D. Pifer, 514 Market St. Philadelphia, Eli Chambers, Latrobe John McLaughlin Huntington, P. H. Schreyer, Milton and A. B. Mann, Coudersport.

In the whole History of Medicine.

No preparation has ever performed such marvelous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long contained series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, wich are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in throat and chest disorders, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. From their knowledge of its composition and effects, physicians use the CHERRY PECTORAL extensively in their practice, and clergymen recommend it. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

KNOXVILLE, October 11.—Lizzie Moran, a beautiful young girl, has been sleeping eight days, awakening only a few moments for food. The case puzzles the doctors.

It will pay the head of every household to devote considerable attention to his children. It will especially pay to become interested in the school-life of the children, and, as much as possible, to know just what they are studying and how they are doing it. It is too common a custom for parents to trust all to the teacher, on the principle that it is their business to educate the young people. But even if the teacher's duty is well performed, the supervision of the father will stimulate the child to renewed exertions, and largely aid the teacher. The child whose father goes over his lessons with him is never at the foot of his class.—Philipsburg Journal.

A TIMELY TOPIC.—The most successful men in business are those who advertise freely. Our greatest dry good and grocery merchants spend hundreds of dollars yearly in this way, and they all say that it pays. The merchants who do little or no business are the ones who do not use printer's ink. Look around and observe the truthfulness of what we say. There is another thing true of the man who advertises: his stock is the largest, best and cheapest, for the reason that it is converted into money every few days. —Ex.

MURDER IN FRANKLIN COUNTY.

A Furnace Hand Strikes Down a Man and Death Results.

The Chambersburg Herald says: On Monday night of last week Jacob Swank, of Carrick, was on his way home from a meeting and as he passed the furnace casting house, he was hailed by John Heeter who was sitting in the door. Heeter called to him to come over and tried to provoke a fight, but Swank said he had no desire to wrangle, that he was too old a man, and passed on. Heeter called him a second time and as Swank turned, Heeter hurled a piece of cinder at him which struck him in the forehead, felling him to the ground. The dastard then ran and jumping on his unconscious victim tramped him terribly. The furnace keeper finally pulled him off and the poor fellow was carried home. He laid in an unconscious state until Friday last when he died. Monday District Attorney Sueserott and the coroner took the matter in hand. Dr. Ramsey, assisted by Dr. Jones, of Mercersburg, had the corpse exhumed, and held a post mortem, at which a large clot of blood in the front part of the brain and a fractured skull were revealed. The murderer escaped and has not been arrested. A reward of $50 is offered for his arrest, by the commissioners. It ought to be $500. The following is an accurate description of the murderer: John Heeter, aged nineteen, five feet six inches tall, weight about 140 pounds, heavy set with short neck, no beard, red faced with thick lips, nose with depressed bridge, flat nostrils and turned up, ears lay forward, heavy under jaw, hair sandy and curly, low forehead, a scar on upper part of nose, downcast look and repulsive countenance. Fifty dollars reward. Exchanges please copy and aid justice.

A FOUL MUREER.

One of the very worst murders was committed in Lancaster city on the night of the 5th inst. Mrs. Seymour was down stairs about 11 o'clock and was in the act of administering medicine to Mrs. Robinson, a sick woman in the house, when there was a knock at the window. She knew it was Edward Sanders by the voice, a hard case of a young man about 25 years of age. She refused him admission; but after he told her he had something very particular to tell her she opened the door. He entered and immediately assaulted her and ravished her. After a severe struggle she escaped and ran into the street and cried for help. A neighbor woman who was up yet let her in; but when she was on the street Sanders followed her and knocked her down. Mrs. Seymour took convulsions and died before a doctor could be called in. When the physician came she was dead. Mrs. Robinson, the sick woman, was sent to the Alms House and the three children to the Home for Friendless Children. Thus, in a few moments was a mother murdered and the family broken up and scattered at the hour of midnight. Any juryman who would refuse to hang such a fellow ought to be hung himself, While the woman was dying Sanders stood by and taunted her.

MURDER NEAR LANCASTER.

LANCASTER, Pa, October 16.—Samuel H. Miller, hotelkeeper and merchant of Union Station, on the Reading and Columbia railroad, put two bullets in William Gensemer at midnight last night, because Gensemer and his friends demanded admission to the hotel. One ball entered his neck and another the temple. Gensemer died at 12.30 to-day. Miller was arrested and lodged in prison in this city late this afternoon.

H. R. WHITCOMB,

LOCK HAVEN, PA.

Takes this method to announce to the people of Penns, Brush and Sugar Valleys that after a highly successful season he still has, to select from, and in order to reduce this large stock quickly he has reduced his prices from 10 to 50 per cent.

We have revolutionized the Clothing business in Lock Haven, can get as good a suit from us as any tailor can make, and at less than half the price; and for style and fit they are often superior. Boys like stylish suits as well as men, and we have them in all grades.

Boys Clothing is a Specialty With Us.

No use looking for better goods for boys than we have—you can't find them. No living man shall be allowed to give their customers better value for their money than can always be found at my store. And where is the mother that likes to make children's clothes? Can't make them fit. "Never look well", is the complaint of every one. We've got all grades and they are just cute and nobby as they can be. A change of weather means a change of clothes; a change of clothes requires a change of patterns and styles of materials. The house that has the choicest and newest changes in styles and patterns is likely to secure the greatest number of new customers and best please and retain its old patrons. In these days it is not everything that looks like clothing that will sell, but in the keen competition between different houses it will be the survival of the fittest.

BALKY HORSES.—As long as we can remember we have read of remedies for balky horses, and they have been pretty much of the same nature, to wit: To examine the harness on one side then on the other, then jump into the wagon and drive off. Very nice, but try it. Next take the horse out of the shafts, and make him go round and round until he is giddy, etc. Rather difficult, we think, to make a horse giddy. Next, to place the hand over the horse's nose and hold it there, preventing him from breathing until he wants to go. Easy to try. Next, take a couple of turns of stout twine around the foreleg just below the knee, tight enough for the horse to feel, and tie in a bownot. He will at once star , and the string can be removed. Next take the tail of the horse between the hind legs and tie by a cord to the saddle-girth. Next, tie a string around the horse's ear close to his head. There is another which we know frequently answers, which is to catch up a handful of dirt and force it into the mouth of the animal. But there is another, the one we have adopted in all cases, and have never yet known to fail. It is to pass a twine around the lower jaw, and of course below the tongue, and tie it quite tight over the top of the head, leaving an end of two or three feet, by which to pull at, walking in front of the horse. This will be found to be a remedy in all cases if properly done.

HOUSE LINEN:—Once a year the house linen should be carefully looked over and arranged. Such sheets and pill w-cases as have seen the largest share of their days of usefulness and yet are still unbroken, should be laid carefully aside, that they may come into service when an unusual number of bed changes are required. Supply their places with new ones, and thus keep an abundence of fresh bedding for emergencies. The kitchen table cloths if they threaten to break, should be cut up, hemmed, and devoted to the dish washing department, and new ones of unbleached linen damask made to take their places. Glass wiping cloths should not be of elderly linen, because of its tell-tale fibres, and because there is a linen provided for glass sufficiently inexpensive for the purpose of even the most economical housewife. Hand towels should be looked over and replenished. Those for the kitchen should be devidid and doomed to the floor-cloth hooks, and others, always with a tape loop at each end of them where a roller is not in use, should take the place of the old towels. There can hardly be too many towels in the kitchen. The dining-room table cloths may be cut into large towels and neatly trimmed.

CULIBIAC.—The Russian culibiac is made of an onion chopped and placed over the fire with two ounces of butter until the latter melts; meantime a small head of white cabbage is chopped and added to the onion, and the cooking process is slowly advanced until the cabbage is tender; it is then seasoned, slightly thickened with white sauce or flour and butter rubbed to a smooth paste, mixed with half a dozen cold hard boiled eggs and a tablespoonful of parsely chopped together, and finished with a little vinegar or sour wine; this preparation of cabbage is put into a dish lined with pastry raised with yeast and enriched with eggs and butter; the surface of the pie thus formed is dusted with bread crumbs, and it is then baked in a moderate oven, and served hot.

SORCSIS PUDDING.– Ingredients: Three sweet oranges, three-fourths pound sugar, one-half pound sweet almonds, rose water, sixteen eggs, one pound fresh butter, puff paste. Take the outside rinds of the orange: boil in several waters until tender; pound them in a mortar with the sugar, blanch the almonds and beat them very fine with rose water to keep them from boiling. Break the eggs and froth six of the whites; beat very light yolks and remaining whites; cream the butter and beat all the ingredients together until perfectly light. Then line pie plates with a thin puff paste, and bake. Sift sugar over tops of the pudding when drawn from the oven.

YEAST THAT WILL KEEP A MONTH.—Boil a handful of hops, strain off the water, grate a dozen raw potatoes into this water, set it on to boil, mix a teacup of flour with cold water and, the same as for gravy thickening, then stir it into the potato water, add to this enough boiling water to make six quarts in all. Set it away to cool in a stone jar and when cool put into it a teacupful of good yeast and a teacupful of brown sugar. This yeast will foam up as white as whipped cream. One pint will do for a large batch of bread.

FRICASSEE OF ONIONS.—Peel two or three dozen of the very small, round, white onions; sprinkle them with salt, let them remain for half an hour, then roll them upon a cloth to dry them slightly, and dredge with flour; throw them into a stewpan in which you have melted two ounces of fresh butter, toss them over a gentle fire for five minutes, drain the fat from them, add a pint of rich milk, minced lemon peel, white pepper, salt and butter. Simmer ten minutes and serve in sauce.

STEWED VEAL.—Cut your meat in pieces wash them clean, put them into the dinner-pot, add three pints of water, put in one onion, some pepper and salt, let it stew one hour; then add potatoes sliced and make a crust of sour milk or cream-tartar, and put in and stew till the potatoes are done, about half an hour; the crust may be made into biscuits. Crumbs of any kind of fresh meat may be used in making a stew.

RICE CHICKEN.—Cover the bottom of a pudding dish with slices of broiled ham: cut up a broiled chicken and nearly fill the dish; pour in the gravy or melted butter to fill the dish, and chopped onions if you like, or a little curry-powder, which is better; then add boiled rice to fill all interstices and to cover the top thick. Bake it for one-half or three-quarters of an hour.

RED ants may be banished from a pantry or store-room by strewing the shelves with a small quantity of cloves either whole or ground. We use the former, as not being so likely to get into food placed upon the shelves. The cloves should be renewed occasionally, as after a time, they lose their strength and efficacy.

WHEN a cow disgorges her food it is a symptom of irritation in the stomach and indigestion, probably arising from the presence of too much acid. Give her two drachms of carbonate of ammonia, with one ounce of ground ginger, in some scalded bran once a day for a week. Afterward she should have a little salt and pounded chalk to lick every day as long as she will take it.

A GOOD hay cutter will save its cost in one season. Hay or straw is not made more nutritious but it is more easily masticated when chaffed; and a saving of exertion is equivalent to a saving of food.

SPENT tan-bark has been plowed into a compact clay soil with the best results, as it rendered the soil mellow and increased its warmth.

THE vulgar term sweeny is applied to a real or imaginary wasting of the muscles of the extremities, and mostly referred to as being located in the shoulder or about the crupper. It is commonly regarded as a special evil, and all sorts of cruel practices and nostrums are resorted to for its cure. The cause or causes of a generally negative result of the treatment applied is simply this, that sweeny, or more properly speaking, wasting or atrophy of the muscles of the horse's limb is, in the plurality of cases merely one of the results of chronic disease of some part of the limb, such as a painful corn, navicular disease and contracted feet, or ringbone, spavin, &c. If a cure of these ailments is possible the so-called sweeny will either gradually disappear in the course of time or will yield to treatment; otherwise the cure of sweeny will prove a failure. In young horses, sweeny, or wasting of the muscles of the shoulder, is often a consequence of unsteady pulling with an ill-fitting collar. In such a case, relieve the animal from work, and apply for some time, once or twice a day, a portion of equal parts of tincture of cantharides and oil of turpentine. The contents of the bottle should be shaken while applying the same. Liberty outdoors, on pasture, will be of additional benefit. Subsequently, give only light work in breast harness or in a soft padded, well fitting collar, until the animal becomes used to puling.

BE FAIR TO THE FORESTS.—Animal and vegetable life go hand in hand, but it is not generally understood that the former is the "little sister" and that the latter is the most independent of the two. Trees, with a chance given, grow without the special care of man. Without trees and other vegetable life man would pass away and be "a lost art." Leaving out of the question the wickedness of the world found in the wholesale destruction of our forests, it will be well to consider the fact that the earth can be made uninhabitable by depriving it of its sources of moisture, which are nothing more or less than the forests. There is a large class of intelligent men who firmly believe that the rapid decrease of the woods of the West is already changing the climate of the entire country. People should plant young trees where old ones are pulled down, and never forget that it is a christian as well as sanitary duty.

TRY IT.—A gentleman has informed us of a very simple and sure cure for treating cuts and scars made by stepping on nails, &c. Every one knows the great danger of stepping on a rusty nail, as, in a great many cases lockjaw sets in and death is the result. The remedy is grated beets, made into a pulp, which, if applied to the cut, will almost immediately give relief. He says a horse of his stepped on a nail, from which he suffered excruciating pain, and was unable to eat. He was thought to be taking lockjaw when the gentleman applied the beets and in fifteen minutes the animal was eating hay, and entirely recovered. A gentleman in this town was so unfortunate as to run a nail into his hand from which he suffered intense agony. The same remedy was applied and in a short time the patient fell asleep. Several other cases might be cited but these will suffice. The gentleman says the cure is a good one and should not be kept from the public. Beets have a cooling effect upon the sore and draw out all inflammation.

DONT WHIP A FRIGHTENED HORSE.—It seems to be a characteristic failing of most coachmen to lay the lash upon a horse that exhibits fear at an object in the street or beside the road. Mr. Bergh, President of the Society of the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, says in the organ of that society what every reasonable being ought to know, and that is to never whip a horse for becoming frightened at any object by the roadside, for if he sees a stump, a log, or a heap of tan-bark in the road, and, while he is eyeing it carefully, and about to pass it, you strike him with the whip, it is the log, or stump, or the tan-bark that is hurting him in his way of reasoning, and the next time he will be more frightened. Give him to smell all these objects and use the bridle to assist you in bringing him carefully to those objects of fear.

FEEDING PIGS.—Pigs that are to be marketed this year should be pushed hard from the beginning. If allowed to stand still for a day there will be a loss. Ground oats and corn mixed, or ground corn with wheat middlings, will make a good slop for the pigs; soaked corn will also be highly relished, and will be found well adapted to keeping the pigs in high flesh; but as soon as the corn is fairly in milk, that will be found the best of all fattening foods. On the other hand, if pigs are to be kept over the winter there should be no stimulating or forcing. Give them the run of a clover field the first summer, with a small allowance of grain.

THE best cider is made as late in the fall as possible and from clean, sound apples. To keep it through the winter and for a year or more—barrel immediately and remove it to a cool vault or cellar, where it should remain until February or March, when it should be put in strong bottles and firmly wired down, lay them on the ground or shelves where the temperature is cool and uniform, and the cider will not ripen too rapidly or freeze. If the cider before barrelling be filtered through sand, it will probably keep better and be free from sediment.

CAUSES apparently very slight may often produce the most marked results in germination. The smaller the seed the more likely in general is it to be influenced by almost imperceptible causes. In sowing turnips those farmers who raise large quantities not infrequently remark that in dry, warm days a vast difference is made in the crops between planting the seed in the fresh, moist soil, just after the marking-out plough, and in planting after the soil has had two or three hours to dry.

FREQUENTLY washing with soapsuds, says Colonel F. D. Curtis, in the Rural New Yorker, does pigs a great deal of good and should always be practiced if they get dirty. Young pigs will never thrive well in a filthy den. If the dam is unclean the pigs are liable, when suckling, to get sore about the head and around their mouths, which will stunt them. When this is the case they should be thoroughly washed and oiled.

THE following drink for relieving sickness of the stomach is said to be very palatable and agreeable: Beat up one egg very well say twenty minutes, then add fresh milk one pint, water one pint, sugar to make it palatable; boil, and let it cool; drink when cold. If it becomes curds and whey it is useless.

FLIES may be effectually disposed of without the use of poison. Take half a teaspoonful of black pepper in powder, one teaspoonful of cream. Mix them well together, and place them in a room on a plate where flies are troublesome, and they will soon disappear.

PASTURES that have been fed a few seasons will generally produce more milk, or more fat, than those which have been newly seeded down.

OUR BEST REWARD

WINSTON, FORSYTHE, Co.. N. C., March 15, 1880.

To the Hop Bitters Manufacturing Co.:

GENTS—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of your Hop Bitters some six month ago. My cure has been wonderful. I am pastor of the First Methodist Church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtue of your bitters.

Very respectfully, REV. H. EERBBE.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 11, 1880.

HOP BITTERS CO.:

Please accept our grateful acknowlegement for the Hop Bitters you were so kind to donate, and which were such a benefit to us. Yours very gratefully,

Old Ladies of the Home of the Frendless.

Delevan, Wis, Sept. 24, 1878.

Gents:—I have taken not quite one bottle of the Hop Bitters. I was a feeble old man of 78 when I got it. To-day I am as active and feel as well as I did at 30. I see a great many that need such a medicine.

D. BOYCE.

Monroe, Mich., Sept. 25, 1875.

Sirs:—I have been taking Hop Bitters for inflammation of kidneys and bladder: it has done me what four doctors failed to do. The effect of the bitters seemed like magic to me. W. L. CARTER.

If you have a sick friend whose life is a burden, one bottle of Hop Bitters may restore that friend to perfect health and happiness. Will you see that that friend has a bottle at once.

Bradford, Pa., May 8, 187–.

It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, &c. I have not seen a sick day in a year since I took Hop Bitters. Several of my neighbors use them.

MRS FANNIE GREEN.

Immense Sale.

Evansville, Wis., June 24, 1879.

Gentlemen:—No Bitters have had one-half the sale here and given such universal satisfaction as your Hop Bitters have. We take pleasure in speaking for their welfare, as every one who tries them is well satisfied with their results. Several such remarkable cures have been made with them here that there are a number of earnest workers in the Hop Bittors cause. One person gained eleven pounds from taking only a few bottles.

SMITH & IDE.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 3, 1880.

HOP BITTERS COMPANY:

I think it my duty to send you a recommend for the benefit of any person wishing to know they are good for general debility and indigestion; strengthen the nervous system and make new life. I recommend my patients to use them.

DR. A PRATT.
Treater of Chronic Diseases.

Superior, Wis., Jan., 1880.

I heard in my neighborhod that your Hop Bitters was doing such a great deal of good among the sick and afflicted with most every kind of disease, and as I had been troubled for fifteen years with neuralgia and all kinds of of rheumatic complaints and kidney trouble, I took one bottle according to directions. It at once did me a great deal of good, and I used another bottle. I am an old man, but am now as I can wish. There are seven or eight families in our place using Hop Bitters as their family medicine, and are so well satisfied with it they will not use any other. One lady here had been bedridden for years, is well and doing her work from the use of three bottles.

LEONARD WHITBECK.

A Voice from the Press.

I take this opportunity to bear testimony to the efficacy of your "Hop Bitters." Expecting to find them nauseous and bitter and composed of bad whisky, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste just like a cup of tea. A Mrs. Cerssell and a Mrs. Connor, friends have likewise tried, and pronounced them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, headache and want of appetite. The two former ailments are gone, and the latter greatly improved. I have a yearly contract with a a doctor to look after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now.

S. GILLILAND, Peoples' Advocate,
July 25, 1878. Pittsburg, Pa.

MR. and MRS. TOPNOODY were getting ready to go out to call on a friend the other evening, and Mrs. T., desiring to look well, was arraying herself a variety of colors. Topnoody noticed it and began to comment. Said he, "Mrs Topnoody, I think a woman of your age ought to wear more subdued colors." "Oh, do you?" was the response. "What would you suggest as becoming your angel wife?" "I think a black dress is simple, tasteful and always becoming." "Indeed!" "Yes, indeed." "Well, then, Topnoody, suppose you die and leave me a widow, so that I can wear the color most becoming to me. Of course you can't see me in it, but it would be such a pleasure and comfort to me to know I was pleasing my dear, dead husband." Then Mrs. Topnoody smiled in such a very satisfied way that Topnoody concluded his suggestions were too previous, and he busied himself tying his necktie, while Mrs. T distributed the rainbow tints as she pleased.

Get out Doors!

The close confinement of all factory work, gives the operatives pallid faces, poor appetite, languid, miserable feelings, poor blood, inactive liver, kidneys and urinary troubles, and all the physicins and medicine in the world cannot help them unless they get out of doors or use Hop Bitters, the purest and best remedy, especially for such cases, having abundance of health, sunshine and rosy cheeks in them. They cost but a trifle.

HORNE TOOKE, when at Eton was oneday asked by the master the reason why a certain verb governed a particular case. He answered: "I don't know." "That is impossible," said the master, "I know you are not ignorant, but obstinate." Horne, however, persisted, and the master flogged. After the master quoted the rule of grammar which bore on the subject, and Horne instantly replied, "I know that very well; but you did not ask the rule; you demanded the reason."

A GREAT CURIOSITY:—A clever sell is perpetrated on the guests of Glen Mountain House, Watkin's Glen N. Y. On a tree near the piazza fronting the glen was hung a cage carefully covered with a piece of calico. Upon it was posted the following notice: "Blind red bat from Havana. Raise the cover carefully, as the light might injure his eyes!" It is fun for the initiated to sit there quietly and see victim after victim cautiously raise the curtain and disclose suspended within the cage—a brick bat!

THE lilies of the field "toil not neither do they spin," but they have their blow out just the same.

NEW CURE FOR TOOTHACHE:—A New Haven woman learning that nitro-glycerine was a new medicine for toothache induced her husband to bring home a small can of it in his vest pocket. Just the moment he put the can-opener to it to get a few drops to put in the aching tooth there was a slight sizzling noise, a hole in the roof of the house and two individuals running about the room without a hair left on their heads and their clothing in shreds. However, the tooth stopped aching.

"Have you spoken to pa about that yet?" anxiously inquired the oldest daughter of her indulgent mother. "No, my child, not yet. Your father is too busy with his creditors to think of pony phaetons and russet harness to match just now." "Bother the creditors," was the snappish reply. "That's what your father is doing, my dear. After he has compromised you shall have your turnout."

THAT wonderful remedy for rheumatism, St. Jacob's Oil, has been used by a large number of people in this city, and with effect truly marvelous. Frequent reports are made where sufferers have been afforded relief, and the sale is growing largely. The fact that it is an external remedy, commends it to many who would not otherwise think of going out of the beaten track to find a remedy.

"MAMMA, is it wicked to whistle on Sunday?" "Yes; Sunday is to be kept holy, my boy." 'Is it very, very wicked?" "Very," answered the pious mother. The lad rested from his inquiries as if deeply pondering the information he had received and then, glancing up, said in a half-sorrowful tone, "Mamma, I guess quails don't go to heaven."

A NICE TIME:—"I've been to see Mrs. Tittletattle," said Mrs. Telltale, "and the way she ran on about you was perfectly scandalous." "So she's been talking about me, has she?" asked Mrs. Brown, quietly. "Yes, indeed, she has," replied Mrs. Telltale, with emphasis. "What a good time you two must have had," said Mrs. Brown, with a sweet smile.

No More Gossip.

If we are correctly informed, St. Jacob's Oil is now the usual tea-party topic in place of the former staple—free gossip. How wise and how much more beneficial!

"MY gracious child," said the old lady to a boy who offered to carry her satchel for five cents. "Where did you get those hands from?" The lad gazed thoughtfully for a moment at his pair of flippers, that looked like bunches of young onions, and then answered proudly: "I belong to the Tontine Base Ball Club.'

TO A WIDOWER:—"Is it true that you are going to marry again?" "It's very true." "And whom do you marry?" "My dead wife's sister." "Is she handsome?" "No." "Rich?" "No." "Then why have you chosen her?" "To tell you the truth, my dear friend, in order not to change mothers-in-law."

Vegetine

Will Cure Cancer.

PROOF! PROOF! PROOF!

H. R. STEVENS, ESQ:—

Dear Sir,—About two years ago a Cancer made its appearance on my face, left side of my nose. When I first noticed it, it was about the size of a pin-head (very small). It increased in size, and spread on my face until it became as large as a common cent. I tried all kinds of remedies, and advice from a physician. It was spreading, and eating into my flesh very fast. I was very much alarmed. I went to see a physician who cured Cancers; he did not give me much encouragement. It pained me very much; I suffered night and day. It would bleed at times very profusely. Every thing was done that could be to try to cure the cancer. My brother had a Cancer on his lip; he submitted to an operatin, being well discouraged. I was one day a Mr. Woodberry's apothecary store, of this town. He gave me your pamphlet, containing manyeures by the use of Vegetine. I found on page 9 where Vegetine had cured a Cancer on a lady's nose. I then bought a bottle of your Vegetine, and it proved a great blessing to me; I could see good effects from it right away. After taking three bottles, it stopped the spreading of the cancer about the edges; it checked the eating into my flesh. I could see it was gradually healing. I kept on taking Vegetine, the cancer slowly disappearing, until I had taken sixteen bottles and it completely cured it. It has left a large scar on the side of my nose; and I feel it my duty to recommend Vegetine to all like sufferers, as it is certainly a great "Blood Purifier." I am now sixty-three years of age, and Vegetine has greatly improved my general health.

Yours, most respectfully,
WM. P. CLEAVES,

We, whose names are annexed, can testify to the above, as Mr. Cleaves is an old resident of this town.

KIDNEY-WORT

DOES WONDERFUL CURES! WHY?

Because it cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develope in Kidney and Urinary Diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Piles, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Disorders and Female Complaints.

SEE WHAT PEOPLE SAY:

Eugene B. Stork, of Junction City, Kansas, says, Kidney-Wort cured him after regular Physicians had been trying for four years.

Mrs. John Arnall, of Washington, Ohio, says her boy was given up to die by four prominent physicians and that he was afterwards cured by Kidney-Wort.

M. M. B. Goodwin, an editor in Chardon, Ohio, says he was not expected to live, being bloated beyond belief, but Kidney-Wort cured him.

Anna L. Jarrett of South Salem, N. Y., says that seven years suffering from kidney troubles and other complications was ended by the use of Kidney-Wort.

John B. Lawrence of Jackson, Tenn., suffered for years from liver and kidney troubles and after taking "barrels of other medicines," Kidney-Wort made him well.

Michael Cato of Montgomery Center, Vt., suffered eight years with kidney difficulty and was unable to work. Kidney-Wort made him well as ever.

"How much is that?" said a mourner in a flower shop, pointing to a wreath of immortelles, inscribed, "To my mother in-law."

"What you like," replied the florist. "I have had it for fourteen years, and no one has ever offered to purchase it."

Almost young Again.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with the good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over 70 years old. A Healthy State

People are constantly changing their homes from East to West and from North to South or vice versa, in search of a healthy State. If they would learn to be contented, and to use the celebrated Kidney-Wort when sick they would be much better off. The whole system can be kept in a healthy state by this simple but effectual remedy. See large adv.

Food for Infants.—The French Commissioners on the Hygiene of Infancy, in awarding the prize in a competition of essayists, report that the conclusions generally arrived at lead to the following recommendations: No child should be reared on artificial food when the mother can suckle it, but such food is preferable to placing the child with a wet-nurse, poorly remunerated and living at her own home. For successfully bringing up an infant by hand the best milk is that of the cow that has recently calved, or similarly of a goat, to which should be added during the first week a half part of water, and subsequently one-fourth or less, according to the digestive powers of the child.
